

Social and Personal

Misses Mildred and Virginia Orice, accompanied by Mrs. E. F. Dunlop, of Pennsylvania, left last night on Mr. Orice's private car for New York. Mrs. Dunlop and the Misses Orice will spend the remainder of the week in New York.

Palms, ferns and goldleaved will bank the chancel and altar of St. John's Episcopal Church at Chester this morning at 10 o'clock, when Miss Margaret McRae Thaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lee Thaw, will become the bride of Joseph Turner Greene, of Gastonia, N. C. The Rev. William Meade Clark, rector of St. James Church, in this city, will perform the ceremony in the presence of a large gathering of friends and relatives. Mrs. Courtney S. Shield will play "Lohengrin" wedding march at the entry of the bride party, and "O Promise Me" very softly during the ceremony. Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" will be played as a recessional.

The bride, who will enter the church with her father, by whom she will be given away, will wear a smart going-away gown of dark blue cloth with a hat to match, and will carry a bouquet of lilies of the valley and white orchids. She will be attended by her sister, Miss Emily McCabe Thaw, as her maid of honor, and James L. Booth, of Oxford, N. C., will be the groom's best man. The marriage will be a very important society event and a very notable audience will be assembled in St. John's Church this morning for the wedding.

Rev. and Mrs. R. Finlay Gayle, formerly of Richmond, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Sally Reed, to Ernest Lindwood Whitehurst, of Norfolk. The wedding will be celebrated on the evening of October 3 at the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Onancock.

The Rev. and Mrs. Landon Randolph Mason have issued cards for the marriage of their daughter, Ida Oswald, to Captain Sinclair Taylor Burke, of Alexandria, the ceremony to take place in Grace Episcopal Church on Tuesday evening, October 15, at 6:30 o'clock.

Stay-at-Home Whist Club.

The Stay-at-Home Whist Club met on Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. Wilmer, 317 West Grace Street. The highest score was made by Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer, and there were three tables engaged. Judge and Mrs. Edmund Waddill, Jr., will entertain the club next Monday evening at their residence, 324 Park Avenue.

Entertained in Lynchburg.

Mrs. A. Randolph Carrington, of Lynchburg, was the hostess Friday afternoon of a reception at Oakwood Club, tendered in honor of her niece, Mrs. E. G. Carrington, of Richmond. Mrs. Carrington was formerly Miss Kathleen Gordon, daughter of J. Newton Gordon, of Richmond, and formerly of Lynchburg.

An elaborate arrangement of wild flowers beautified the club building, the reception-room being divided into two apartments by a sweeping hedge of dogwood foliage, cleft by a gate to permit the passage of the guests.

About two hundred called during the afternoon.

At Home on Thursday.

Mrs. Wesley Baker, formerly Miss Ella Felt, will be at home informally on Thursday afternoon, October 3, from 4 to 6 o'clock at Richmond Hall, Ginter Park. Mrs. Baker will also be at home informally on the first Thursday afternoon in every month during the winter season.

Of Interest Here.

Says the Washington Post of yesterday morning:

"Major Charles Beverly Ewing, U. S. A., and Mrs. Ewing have announced from their home at Savannah, Ga., the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor Felber Ewing, to Lieutenant Henry Lee Watson, First Cavalry, United States Army. Miss Ewing is a granddaughter of the late Mrs. Felber, widow of Admiral Felber, and a niece of the late Mrs. Francis M. Cockrell, wife of former Senator Cockrell. Her mother, formerly Miss Lelia Johnson, is a sister of Paul E. Johnson, of Washington."

No Meeting.

There will be no meeting of the board of managers of the Sheltering Arms Free Hospital on Thursday morning, owing to the absence of the officers from the city. The date of the next meeting will be announced later.

Important Meetings.

There will be a meeting of the Richmond Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, at Lee Camp Hall this morning at 11 o'clock. The meeting is to elect delegates to the Washington convention, and to complete arrangements to go to Caronsburg next week. A full attendance is desired.

The first fall meeting of the Ginter Park Woman's Club will be held in the assembly hall this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

The Kindergarten Association will meet in the Virginia Mechanics' Institute, room 25, at 4 o'clock this afternoon. All the kindergartners in Richmond are expected to be present. Miss Coleman will address the meeting.

In and Out of Town.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick William Scott and their children have returned from abroad and are at their home on West Franklin Street for the winter.

The Misses Payton have closed their cottage at the Orkney Springs and are now at the Plains in Fauquier County.

John Meredith has gone to the University of Virginia, where he will be a student for this season.

Mrs. R. T. Glassell has returned to Bowling Green, after a visit to friends in this city.

Mrs. Charles Kennon, of "Norwood," has been the recent guest of relatives in this city.

Mrs. John Antrim and little daughter, of Roanoke, are spending some time in Richmond.

Mrs. Kate Langley Boucher has returned from Norfolk, where she has been visiting relatives.

Mrs. James A. Moncre and children have returned to Richmond after spending some time in Cumberland County.

Olis Richardson, of this city, is motoring with a party of friends in the Valley of Virginia.

Miss Zeile Minor has returned to Richmond, after visiting Mrs. Alex Black, in Blacksburg.

Mrs. E. J. Johnston, who has been absent from the city for the past three months, has returned to her home.

William C. Jackson has returned from Old Point, where he spent the summer months.

Miss Eliza Christian, of "Bon Air," is visiting friends in this city for a few days.

Howard Tilgham, who has been in New York City, has returned to Richmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Wortham and their family have returned from their country home in Chesterfield.

Ladies' Knit Union
Suits, 50c.
Fleeced lined, high neck, long sleeves and ankle length, full and elastic.
Kaufmann & Co.

H. M. Shield, Miss Louise Shield, Mrs. F. T. Grymes, Miss Page Grymes, Gordon McCabe, Mr. and Mrs. Courtland Walton, Dr. J. R. Gildersleeve, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Payne, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Smith, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Garnett, Dr. and Mrs. H. Stuart MacLean, Mr. and Mrs. C. Sims Bailey, C. R. Gray, R. N. Polard, Miss Nora Weisger, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Greene, Rev. and Mrs. G. R. Greene, of Gastonia, N. C., and Mr. and Mrs. W. Scott Greene, of Greenville, S. C.

The bride is a granddaughter of the Rev. Christopher McRae and is a niece of Colonel W. Gordon McCabe, of this city. Mr. Greene, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Greene, of North Carolina, and cousin of Judge James Webb and United States Congressman E. Yates Webb, of Shelby, N. C. The marriage is a very important society event and a very notable audience will be assembled in St. John's Church this morning for the wedding.

Building Permits.
Building and repair permits were issued yesterday as follows:
A. E. Hubbard, to erect two detached two-story brick dwellings, 3214-3215 Floyd Avenue, to cost $6,000.

The Tredgar Company, to erect a one-story steel frame pipe and tank on the north side of Tredgar Street, between Sixth and Seventh Streets, to cost $900.

Richard, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad Company, to repair a brick storage and office building on the south side of Leigh Street, between Embarby and the Hermitage Road, to cost $750.

City Investing Corporation, to repair a brick office and store, 1210 East Main Street, to cost $355.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Contributions.
Harrisonburg, Va., October 1.—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt has contributed $50 towards paying for the construction of an Episcopal mission school building, now being erected at Yancey, Rockingham County. The school is of the type of the "Episcopal" mission school, which is a very interesting mountain people by Rev. J. R. Ellis and others of the Episcopal Church.

For Boys
Ask your doctor how often he prescribes an alcoholic stimulant for children. He will probably say, "Very, very rarely." Ask him how often he prescribes a tonic for them. He will probably answer, "Very, very frequently." Then ask him about Ayer's non-alcoholic Sarsaparilla.

Save These Labels
Daisy Brand
Loaf
ABCCO

$8.00 24-pc. Tea Set
AMERICAN BREAD AND BAKING CO.
6 East Leigh Street.

Better School Shoes for the Money — at Seymour Cycle
ELEVEN W. BROAD

Office Furniture
Sydnor & Hundley, Inc.
Grace and Seventh
Open Every Day Until 6 o'clock.

The Velvet Kind
LARGE QUANTITY EVERY DAY
FURTY ICE CREAM CORP.
Monroe 1565.

Coles Hot Blast Heaters
at
Jones Bros. & Co. Inc.,
1418-1420 E. Main St.

J. B. Mosby & Co.
Silks To-Day at Special Prices.

Dr. J. B. Mosby & Co.
Special displays of new fall styles in Women's Apparel.

REINACH, Inc.
107 E. BROAD STREET
MILLINERY—Women's and Misses' Outer Apparel.

Children's White Canvas
Button Shoes, $1.00
ALBERT STEIN
KING OF SHOES
5th and Broad

Wedding Flowers
First Artists in Arranging
Sole Agents for
At Home, 107 E. BROAD
HAMMOND

SCHOOL SHOES
"The Kind That Wear"
$1.50 Pair.
Holmes
X. W. Corner Third and Broad.

TO AWARD SCHOLARSHIP
Young men desiring to enter Richmond College for the collegiate course should apply in writing to Mayor Ainslie, at the City Hall, who has a scholarship to be given away. A Richmond woman, who withholds her name, has provided the funds for a memorial scholarship to be given to the student who applied to Mayor Ainslie for the name of some suitable person as the beneficiary for this season. The Mayor will consider all applications made at once, and will in the next day or two make a recommendation to the donor. Progress reports will be required. Only those qualified to enter the Freshman class this season, and who without such assistance would be unable to do so, need apply.

Brief Meeting of the Council.
A brief meeting of the Council of the City of Richmond was held last night. The reduction of membership of the committee from seventeen to seven resulted in a crowded session. The committee reported on the city water mains to provide tap on the new city wharf for the use of vessels alongside. Progress was reported on the repairs to the lock gates at the City Dock. The decayed condition of the old gates having necessitated much more extensive repairs than were anticipated.

Opening of New Hospital.
Institution of Harrisonburg Erected at Cost of $30,000.
Harrisonburg, Va., October 1.—The Rockingham Memorial Hospital, an institution which for four years has been under construction at a cost of $30,000, was opened to the public this morning with public ceremonies, which were attended by a large crowd. Bells and music were suspended between 11 and 12 o'clock in order that all might attend the ceremonies.

The principal address was delivered by Rev. J. W. Duffey, D. D., of Winchester, who was pastor of the Harrisonburg Methodist Church four or five years ago, and who delivered a sermon that is said to have played a part in starting the hospital movement. Written, president of the trustees, followed Dr. Duffey with an address. Free lunch was served at noon by the Hospital Ladies' Auxiliary.

When William G. Leake, of Harrisonburg, died five years ago he bequeathed the sum of $30,000 for the purpose of founding a hospital here. Mr. Leake, who was a member of a distinguished Virginia family, was a great sufferer in his lifetime, several times having to go to distant hospitals for treatment and the last time for the amputation of his leg. It was his own sufferings that impressed him with the need of a hospital here. The nearest hospital in the Shenandoah Valley, at that time, was in Strasburg, fifty miles south, and in Strasburg, fifty miles north.

The unveiling of the Leake memorial tablet by Little Elizabeth Leake, granddaughter of the donor, was a part of the opening ceremonies this morning.

The hospital is located on a site adjacent to the State Normal School grounds, in the southern part of the town.

Popular subscriptions, the secret of the success of the hospital, were aided in raising money necessary to complete the building.

Miss Nan Dupuy, of St. Luke's Hospital, in Washington, D. C., a nurse and a first assistant.

Husbands Ready for Inspection.
Preparations were begun last night by the Richmond Howards for the annual inspection, which will be held at the army next Monday night. Captain W. M. Moore, who has been away on his vacation, was present, and began his task of straightening up the Howards.

It is possible no more week-end camps will be held this year. The ground was too damp last Saturday and it seemed to be getting rather cool for work of this sort. A platoon may be called out for some drill exercises.

Police Auto Patrol Arrives.
The new police automobile patrol, which was bought several months ago by the Board of Police Commissioners, and which will be stationed in the First District, arrived in the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad Station last night. The new machine, a Pope-Hartford, is much larger than the Alco car stationed in the Second District. Its first service, it was reported, will be to patrol the grounds, which will be stationed at the State Fair grounds.

FREE.
25c Instruction Book in knitting and crocheting with every purchase of Utopia yarn.

FREE.
Lessons given in the use of Grayona Embroidery Floss by Miss Baum, of New York.

Art Department Opening Special
Renaissance Scarfs and Squares
Less Than Wholesale Cost

All elaborately made; not a piece in the lot worth less than $1.50, and from that up to $5.50.
Scarfs, 20x54 inches 89c
Squares, 30x36 inches
On sale Wednesday at 10:30. No phone orders accepted.
(See window display.)

NOTICE.—From now until November 10th we will sponge and shrink goods on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, beginning at 9 A.M.
Quick deliveries guaranteed.

MAJOR IS SELECTED TO ATTEND PRINCE

Hon. William Cadogan Gets Important Appointment From King George.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.
The Hon. William Cadogan, of the Tenth Hussar Regiment, to the position of Esquerry to the Prince of Wales, is a very interesting appointment, as it means that the major has been selected to act as one of the chief mentors of his future sovereign. As Esquerry, he will be in constant attendance on the prince, and the etiquette of the court, which is a very important part of the royal household, will be under his supervision.

It is in many ways a suitable one. For the Tenth Hussars, the "Prince of Wales's" regiment, its titular colonelcy being invariably held by the heir to the crown, who also receives at any time the young prince, it is a position of great honor and responsibility.

Major Cadogan, who is the third of the sons of Lord Cadogan, stands second in line of succession to his father's peerage and the valuable estate, which comprises the greater part of the Chelsea district of London, served throughout the Boer War, and acted as A. D. C. to King George and Queen Mary on the occasion of their visit to India during the reign of King Edward. Major Cadogan's elder brother, Viscount Chelsea, although married, has no children.

Although the Cadogan Earldom only dates from the time of the young Pitt, at the close of the eighteenth century, yet the lineage of the family is extremely ancient, it having been founded by a Welsh Prince of Dyfed, who had a son named Cadogan. An earl's town house is one of the finest in the British metropolis, and is famous for its marble staircase, its great hall, and its state and marble staircases. It is of modern construction, but stands on the site of an ancient mansion, which belonged in turn to Queen Catherine Parr, one of the many consorts of Henry VIII, and to the Duke of Somerset of Reformation times, and to Sir Hans Sloane.

General Sir John French, now crossing the ocean, bound for New York, on board the Lusitania, which is due the day after to-morrow, is the chief of the imperial general staff of the British army, and the military member of the royal council, with a salary of $15,000 a year, in addition to all sorts of allowances. In fact, he holds the position which, according to statements by the present government in Parliament, would entitle him to the supreme command of the British forces in the event of war; and it is no secret in military and official circles in England that it has been his presence at the War Department in London that has contributed more than anything else to the reorganization of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener to diplomatic and administrative employment in Egypt.

Sir John, the son of a grand old family, was originally intended for the church, was sent against his will into the navy, and after attaining the rank of sub-lieutenant, quitted the sea in order to join the army as a Hussar officer. He enjoys the well merited reputation of being the most able cavalry leader of the English army, and won fame as such during the Boer War. Not with all that, he still rides like a sailor, that is to say, very ungracefully. Indeed, he is not a good rider, which is all the more astonishing in view of his position, where a superior equestrian, or at least a competent one, is a necessary part of the equipment.

His first active service in Egypt, and took part in the unsuccessful Nile expedition under Lord Wolseley, for the relief of General "Cherry" Gordon at Khartoum. Later on, while stationed at Aldershot, he incurred a good deal of criticism, and even censure, on the part of his military superiors, for embarking in cavalry tactics that did not commend themselves to the generals of the old school, and his career was regarded by many in consequence thereof as entitled him to the supreme command of the British forces in the event of war.

There has been his presence at the War Department in London that has contributed more than anything else to the reorganization of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener to diplomatic and administrative employment in Egypt.

Sir John, the son of a grand old family, was originally intended for the church, was sent against his will into the navy, and after attaining the rank of sub-lieutenant, quitted the sea in order to join the army as a Hussar officer. He enjoys the well merited reputation of being the most able cavalry leader of the English army, and won fame as such during the Boer War. Not with all that, he still rides like a sailor, that is to say, very ungracefully. Indeed, he is not a good rider, which is all the more astonishing in view of his position, where a superior equestrian, or at least a competent one, is a necessary part of the equipment.

His first active service in Egypt, and took part in the unsuccessful Nile expedition under Lord Wolseley, for the relief of General "Cherry" Gordon at Khartoum. Later on, while stationed at Aldershot, he incurred a good deal of criticism, and even censure, on the part of his military superiors, for embarking in cavalry tactics that did not commend themselves to the generals of the old school, and his career was regarded by many in consequence thereof as entitled him to the supreme command of the British forces in the event of war.

There has been his presence at the War Department in London that has contributed more than anything else to the reorganization of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener to diplomatic and administrative employment in Egypt.

Sir John, the son of a grand old family, was originally intended for the church, was sent against his will into the navy, and after attaining the rank of sub-lieutenant, quitted the sea in order to join the army as a Hussar officer. He enjoys the well merited reputation of being the most able cavalry leader of the English army, and won fame as such during the Boer War. Not with all that, he still rides like a sailor, that is to say, very ungracefully. Indeed, he is not a good rider, which is all the more astonishing in view of his position, where a superior equestrian, or at least a competent one, is a necessary part of the equipment.

His first active service in Egypt, and took part in the unsuccessful Nile expedition under Lord Wolseley, for the relief of General "Cherry" Gordon at Khartoum. Later on, while stationed at Aldershot, he incurred a good deal of criticism, and even censure, on the part of his military superiors, for embarking in cavalry tactics that did not commend themselves to the generals of the old school, and his career was regarded by many in consequence thereof as entitled him to the supreme command of the British forces in the event of war.

There has been his presence at the War Department in London that has contributed more than anything else to the reorganization of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener to diplomatic and administrative employment in Egypt.

Sir John, the son of a grand old family, was originally intended for the church, was sent against his will into the navy, and after attaining the rank of sub-lieutenant, quitted the sea in order to join the army as a Hussar officer. He enjoys the well merited reputation of being the most able cavalry leader of the English army, and won fame as such during the Boer War. Not with all that, he still rides like a sailor, that is to say, very ungracefully. Indeed, he is not a good rider, which is all the more astonishing in view of his position, where a superior equestrian, or at least a competent one, is a necessary part of the equipment.

His first active service in Egypt, and took part in the unsuccessful Nile expedition under Lord Wolseley, for the relief of General "Cherry" Gordon at Khartoum. Later on, while stationed at Aldershot, he incurred a good deal of criticism, and even censure, on the part of his military superiors, for embarking in cavalry tactics that did not commend themselves to the generals of the old school, and his career was regarded by many in consequence thereof as entitled him to the supreme command of the British forces in the event of war.

There has been his presence at the War Department in London that has contributed more than anything else to the reorganization of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener to diplomatic and administrative employment in Egypt.

Sir John, the son of a grand old family, was originally intended for the church, was sent against his will into the navy, and after attaining the rank of sub-lieutenant, quitted the sea in order to join the army as a Hussar officer. He enjoys the well merited reputation of being the most able cavalry leader of the English army, and won fame as such during the Boer War. Not with all that, he still rides like a sailor, that is to say, very ungracefully. Indeed, he is not a good rider, which is all the more astonishing in view of his position, where a superior equestrian, or at least a competent one, is a necessary part of the equipment.

His first active service in Egypt, and took part in the unsuccessful Nile expedition under Lord Wolseley, for the relief of General "Cherry" Gordon at Khartoum. Later on, while stationed at Aldershot, he incurred a good deal of criticism, and even censure, on the part of his military superiors, for embarking in cavalry tactics that did not commend themselves to the generals of the old school, and his career was regarded by many in consequence thereof as entitled him to the supreme command of the British forces in the event of war.

There has been his presence at the War Department in London that has contributed more than anything else to the reorganization of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener to diplomatic and administrative employment in Egypt.

Sir John, the son of a grand old family, was originally intended for the church, was sent against his will into the navy, and after attaining the rank of sub-lieutenant, quitted the sea in order to join the army as a Hussar officer. He enjoys the well merited reputation of being the most able cavalry leader of the English army, and won fame as such during the Boer War. Not with all that, he still rides like a sailor, that is to say, very ungracefully. Indeed, he is not a good rider, which is all the more astonishing in view of his position, where a superior equestrian, or at least a competent one, is a necessary part of the equipment.

His first active service in Egypt, and took part in the unsuccessful Nile expedition under Lord Wolseley, for the relief of General "Cherry" Gordon at Khartoum. Later on, while stationed at Aldershot, he incurred a good deal of criticism, and even censure, on the part of his military superiors, for embarking in cavalry tactics that did not commend themselves to the generals of the old school, and his career was regarded by many in consequence thereof as entitled him to the supreme command of the British forces in the event of war.

There has been his presence at the War Department in London that has contributed more than anything else to the reorganization of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener to diplomatic and administrative employment in Egypt.

Sir John, the son of a grand old family, was originally intended for the church, was sent against his will into the navy, and after attaining the rank of sub-lieutenant, quitted the sea in order to join the army as a Hussar officer. He enjoys the well merited reputation of being the most able cavalry leader of the English army, and won fame as such during the Boer War. Not with all that, he still rides like a sailor, that is to say, very ungracefully. Indeed, he is not a good rider, which is all the more astonishing in view of his position, where a superior equestrian, or at least a competent one, is a necessary part of the equipment.

His first active service in Egypt, and took part in the unsuccessful Nile expedition under Lord Wolseley, for the relief of General "Cherry" Gordon at Khartoum. Later on, while stationed at Aldershot, he incurred a good deal of criticism, and even censure, on the part of his military superiors, for embarking in cavalry tactics that did not commend themselves to the generals of the old school, and his career was regarded by many in consequence thereof as entitled him to the supreme command of the British forces in the event of war.

There has been his presence at the War Department in London that has contributed more than anything else to the reorganization of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener to diplomatic and administrative employment in Egypt.

Sir John, the son of a grand old family, was originally intended for the church, was sent against his will into the navy, and after attaining the rank of sub-lieutenant, quitted the sea in order to join the army as a Hussar officer. He enjoys the well merited reputation of being the most able cavalry leader of the English army, and won fame as such during the Boer War. Not with all that, he still rides like a sailor, that is to say, very ungracefully. Indeed, he is not a good rider, which is all the more astonishing in view of his position, where a superior equestrian, or at least a competent one, is a necessary part of the equipment.

His first active service in Egypt, and took part in the unsuccessful Nile expedition under Lord Wolseley, for the relief of General "Cherry" Gordon at Khartoum. Later on, while stationed at Aldershot, he incurred a good deal of criticism, and even censure, on the part of his military superiors, for embarking in cavalry tactics that did not commend themselves to the generals of the old school, and his career was regarded by many in consequence thereof as entitled him to the supreme command of the British forces in the event of war.

There has been his presence at the War Department in London that has contributed more than anything else to the reorganization of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener to diplomatic and administrative employment in Egypt.

FREE.
25c Instruction Book in knitting and crocheting with every purchase of Utopia yarn.

FREE.
Lessons given in the use of Grayona Embroidery Floss by Miss Baum, of New York.

Art Department Opening Special
Renaissance Scarfs and Squares
Less Than Wholesale Cost

All elaborately made; not a piece in the lot worth less than $1.50, and from that up to $5.50.
Scarfs, 20x54 inches 89c
Squares, 30x36 inches
On sale Wednesday at 10:30. No phone orders accepted.
(See window display.)

NOTICE.—From now until November 10th we will sponge and shrink goods on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, beginning at 9 A.M.
Quick deliveries guaranteed.

MAJOR IS SELECTED TO ATTEND PRINCE

Hon. William Cadogan Gets Important Appointment From King George.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.
The Hon. William Cadogan, of the Tenth Hussar Regiment, to the position of Esquerry to the Prince of Wales, is a very interesting appointment, as it means that the major has been selected to act as one of the chief mentors of his future sovereign. As Esquerry, he will be in constant attendance on the prince, and the etiquette of the court, which is a very important part of the royal household, will be under his supervision.

It is in many ways a suitable one. For the Tenth Hussars, the "Prince of Wales's" regiment, its titular colonelcy being invariably held by the heir to the crown, who also receives at any time the young prince, it is a position of great honor and responsibility.

Major Cadogan, who is the third of the sons of Lord Cadogan, stands second in line of succession to his father's peerage and the valuable estate, which comprises the greater part of the Chelsea district of London, served throughout the Boer War, and acted as A. D. C. to King George and Queen Mary on the occasion of their visit to India during the reign of King Edward. Major Cadogan's elder brother, Viscount Chelsea, although married, has no children.

Although the Cadogan Earldom only dates from the time of the young Pitt, at the close of the eighteenth century, yet the lineage of the family is extremely ancient, it having been founded by a Welsh Prince of Dyfed, who had a son named Cadogan. An earl's town house is one of the finest in the British metropolis, and is famous for its marble staircase, its great hall, and its state and marble staircases. It is of modern construction, but stands on the site of an ancient mansion, which belonged in turn to Queen Catherine Parr, one of the many consorts of Henry VIII, and to the Duke of Somerset of Reformation times, and to Sir Hans Sloane.

General Sir John French, now crossing the ocean, bound for New York, on board the Lusitania, which is due the day after to-morrow, is the chief of the imperial general staff of the British army, and the military member of the royal council, with a salary of $15,000 a year, in addition to all sorts of allowances. In fact, he holds the position which, according to statements by the present government in Parliament, would entitle him to the supreme command of the British forces in the event of war; and it is no secret in military and official circles in England that it has been his presence at the War Department in London that has contributed more than anything else to the reorganization of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener to diplomatic and administrative employment in Egypt.

Sir John, the son of a grand old family, was originally intended for the church, was sent against his will into the navy, and after attaining the rank of sub-lieutenant, quitted the sea in order to join the army as a Hussar officer. He enjoys the well merited reputation of being the most able cavalry leader of the English army, and won fame as such during the Boer War. Not with all that, he still rides like a sailor, that is to say, very ungracefully. Indeed, he is not a good rider, which is all the more astonishing in view of his position, where a superior equestrian, or at least a competent one, is a necessary part of the equipment.

His first active service in Egypt, and took part in the unsuccessful Nile expedition under Lord Wolseley, for the relief of General "Cherry" Gordon at Khartoum. Later on, while stationed at Aldershot, he incurred a good deal of criticism, and even censure, on the part of his military superiors, for embarking in cavalry tactics that did not commend themselves to the generals of the old school, and his career was regarded by many in consequence thereof as entitled him to the supreme command of the British forces in the event of war.

There has been his presence at the War Department in London that has contributed more than anything else to the reorganization of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener to diplomatic and administrative employment in Egypt.